

Drawing, Drawing, and More Drawing!

My "Art in the Library" exhibit is just a little over a week away! I have been very busy preparing for it. I have done a lot of drawings in the past but so many of them have been sold or gifted so I am having to come up with a bunch more as I plan to have 20 total drawings on display.

Moving Saga Continued

A couple of weeks ago, Robert and I headed to Kathy and Tim's house in Sonoma to oversee movers packing up stuff to go to Lake Oswego for the Pines' move from their vacation rental into their 6-month rental. Robert and Tim then drove the rental truck up to arrive on the day they moved from one house to the other. Robert spent a few days helping with unpacking and organizing before flying back to Napa. Rylan, Aubrey, and Sierra LOVED having their Grandpa spend time with them!

First day of school in Oregon!

All three grandkids started school on August 27th. With the move into their new home, the girls are only a two-block walk from their school and Rylan only has a few blocks to walk to catch the bus to his school! Rylan (13) is now in the eighth grade, Aubrey (10) is a fourth grader and Sierra (8) is a third grader!

Already in the Groove

It didn't take long for Rylan, Aubrey, and Sierra to become integrated into Lake Oswego's activity culture: Soccer, ceramics, ballet Lessons, basketball, violin lessons, robotics club and more—all on top of making new friends, discovering new parks, and finding the best place for ice cream! Big bonus: Most everything is close!
